

INSIDE
HIGHER ED

Teaching in a Digital Age

An Inside Higher Ed webcast

May 22, 2019

2 p.m. Eastern

Presenters

- Scott Jaschik, editor, Inside Higher Ed,
scott.jaschik@insidehighered.com
- Doug Lederman, editor, Inside Higher Ed,
doug.lederman@insidehighered.com

Perspective: I

“Isn’t it funny how day by day nothing changes, but when you look back everything is different?”

--Sometimes attributed to C.S. Lewis (with dispute about whether he said/wrote it)

Perspective: II

RadStad
@radstads

Follow

It's been 4 days. WiFi is still down. Professor can't teach us anything, and I don't even have any ways to procrastinate my work. Hell is real and it's Amherst College

11:40 AM - 14 Feb 2019

12 Likes

2

12

Tweet your reply

107.9 WSRZ @WSRZ · Feb 21

Replying to @radstads

It's almost like going to college back in the 80's

Discussion Boards

-iStock

Mobile Generation

-iStock

Hybrid Everything

-iStock

Knowing Digital

--iStock

Course Length / Course Schedules

- Courses
- Classes

One Course, Multiple Institutions

- To reach critical mass of students
- To add perspectives

Era of E-Books and OER

--iStock

Competency-Based Education

COMPETENCY

-iStock

Challenges of Training the (Future) Faculty

- Training doctoral students to teach has historically not been a major emphasis of graduate schools.
- Many senior scholars in graduate departments may not be as well versed as they should be on digital classrooms.
- Many faculty members may want to learn to be more effective teachers in digital era, but may not see good avenues to do so.

Dealing With the Downsides: The Great Laptop Ban Debate

-iStock

Dealing With the Downsides: Streaming While 'Studying'

Q&A

- Your questions
- Your ideas for future coverage

With Thanks

D2L™